

The gunsmiths' shops in town are now daily crowded with the most respectable citizens, all buying arms, to defend their lives against assassins, as the police would do it for them.

It is pleasant to hear, in these horrid election times, that the English residents are using great efforts to compete with our German friends in the musical arena.

A Chicago girl, who has lost her left leg, advertises for a husband who has no right one; as thus they can buy their shoes together and have no thing over?

Two young ladies of New York were examining a statuette of Andromeda, labelled, 'Executed in Terra Cotta'; 'Executed in Terra Cotta,' says one, 'where is that?'

There is now such a rush of people through Rosario, to and from the Interior, that the hotel accommodation of the place is quite unequal to the demand for it, and a new hotel is called for.

The chameleon can change color from the most intense black to the purest white, passing through all intermediate shades, save red and blue.

There are three stages in typhoid fever; the first where the temperature of the body increases almost following a fixed scale. To diminish this heat in the case of continuous fevers, cold baths have been successfully employed in the Paris hospitals of late, as indeed elsewhere.

Hippocrates signalled the efficacy of cold water applications for fevers. When the patient has a warmth beyond a fixed degree, a cold bath of a stated temperature ought to be given for the space of fifteen minutes every three hours, a mouthful of iced water to be swallowed every quarter of an hour.

Conting the body with an embrocation of grease, Loviusion asserts, achieves the same results as cold water. M. Foussagiere has studied the effect of no-se upon health, such as is peculiar to the streets of a city, or to various branches of industry.

The best news to-day was the appearance of rain. At last the weather seems about to break. The drought in the west is so terrible, and our good day's rain is worth more to the country than all the Cedus ever issued.

The title of sale of the Passage A go time was signed to-day, and the money paid. The produce news from Europe pre-dominates on 'Change to-day. Everything looks well save a flow, which looks less.

The Custom House receipts show a great falling off. On 9th inst, 26,900, and on 8th inst, 26,700 pats. The treasury balance in the banks stood on the 8th, as—Provincia Bank, 2,306,000 pats. National Bank, 3,106,000 pa s.

There are several examples of the lost organs of animals being replaced. Lizards have received new tails, crabs new claws, and certain animals new spleens. The late M. Legros cut off the fore paws of several Salamanders, and the members have been reproduced, even when the shoulder blade was removed.

M. Pouchet who has devoted much attention to the colors of fish, explains that the blue in the jowls of the cock, and on the chin and stomach of the mandrill baboon results from the skin being very thick in these parts, as well as overlying cells of beautiful black pigment—hence, the bluish reflection. The same cause explains how tattooing with black China ink becomes blue, the black particles penetrating below the skin, and why the veins appear blue, and contusions turn so. In certain diseases where the nails become blue, nutrition is weak, and the blood instead of being renewed, sojourns under the nails, hence the livid appearance.

The chameleon can change color from the most intense black to the purest white, passing through all intermediate shades, save red and blue. These changes do not take place according to M. Bert, from the reflection of surrounding objects, but from the influences of fright and anger. The nervous system acts directly, not by the blood, for if a principal artery be tied up, the changes of color continue all the same; but cut a nerve, and that part of the body it traverses becomes black. Besides, when asleep the chameleon, as is proverbially known, is white. Again, if the spinal marrow be cut at the back, the lower part of the body becomes black, but the animal has still the power, the will, to develop the changes of color in the upper part of the body. Chameleons are almost insensible to strychnine.
